Course:	Sociology of Globalization
Course ID	Course status	Semester	ECTS credits	Lessons (Lessons+Exercises+Laboratory)
12573	Mandatory	2	6	2+2+0
Programs	SOCIOLOGY
Prerequisites	Conditionality with other disciplines is not foreseen
Aims	Acquaintance of students with the basic postulates of theoretical directions (their ideological discussion in scientific discourse) which are applied when defining globalization. The main task of the course is for students to identify, communicate and answer the question of how modern sociological theories fundamentally differ in terms of the impact and consequences of globalization, as well as explanations of different perspectives, through a sociological examination.
Learning outcomes	After passing the Sociology of Globalization exam, the student will be able to: 1. Apply and differentiate theoretical viewpoints in the study of globalization; 2. Analyzes the social process in which geographical limitations of social and cultural activities lose their significance; 3. Theoretically points out the necessity of analyzing its neoliberal concept; 4. Critical approach to political doctrines (liberalism and neoliberalism) and forms of state organization (liberal-democratic or "incentive polyarchy") that are imposed today as patterns of development in the countries of the post-socialist world; 5. Explain the geopolitical relations and philosophical ideas on the basis of which the civilizations that determine the currents of contemporary globalization were created; 6. Explain and analyze the political geography of postmodernity;
